From the heart of Switzerland

A wide-angle photograph of a mountainous landscape in the Swiss Alps. The foreground is dominated by a lush green valley with a mix of grass and small shrubs. A few clusters of tall evergreen trees are scattered across the slopes. In the middle ground, the valley opens up into a larger, more rugged area with more exposed rock and a mix of green and brown vegetation. The background features towering, rocky mountain peaks with patches of snow and ice clinging to their upper slopes. The sky is filled with heavy, greyish-blue clouds, creating a dramatic and somewhat moody atmosphere.

A Swiss affair from start to finish: a bed designed by a young Swiss man. Fine natural wood grown and cultivated for decades. Using sustainable forestry practices, select trees are felled, carefully sawn and dried. Once this wood has been stored in climate-controlled conditions, it is then further processed in the heart of Switzerland. The experienced joiner selects the perfect pieces to craft your natural wooden bed with the utmost love and care. This is followed by a natural oil treatment to give your unique piece its silky gloss finish.

Crafting with character

"For me, the real essence of the project is personal well-being. Luxurious, comfortable bedding needs the perfect bed frame to complement it. As a natural, stable material, solid wood offers the ideal foundation for this. The fine legs that curve slightly inwards add a point of interest, making the whole bed appear lighter while showcasing the high standard of finishing."

Sandro Halter, designer

The signature feature of the aura bed is its slender feet, with their tapered design and bevelled faces. Carefully carved from a block of natural wood with the utmost precision and care, they are truly a marvel of design, bringing the concept by designer Sandro Halter to life with a lightweight silhouette.
